1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.
- 2. Claims 1, 3, 7-9, 11, and 13-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Brooks, Jr. et al., U. S. Patent No. 6212555.

Regarding claims 1 and 3, Brooks, Jr. et al., (herein, Brooks) discloses an audio transfer storage and playback system (figures 1-3). Brooks disclosure comprises a computer server (1) with music/recording libraries of prerecorded music or voice on tapes, CDs, etc., and means of recording and storing live music or voice, wherein the recorded music may be categorized as to format as classical, jazz, contemporary, rap, and others, and same for the recorded voice works (col. 3, lines 6-17), which reads on a memory for storing audio information comprising a plurality of unit information; a transmission means (5) to deliver the stored data which includes the different formats (classical, jazz, contemporary, rap, and others, and same for the recorded voice works) in which the music and voice recordings are provided for playback in an audio receiver/player device, (col. 3, lines 17-24 and col. 30-41), which reads on the transmitting device for transmitting correspondence information to an external portions; a receiver/player (6) receives the transmitted audio data with reproduction control information, which is inherent by the fact that the audio works having been record or stored in different formats, which reads obtaining information to control the reproduction manner of the audio; and a microprocessing unit (10) or microprocessing memory system for enabling the reproduction of the audio information unit from memory (col. 3, lines 56-65), which reads on a controlling device.

Regarding claim 5, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Brooks disclose that information and/or data may be transferred and/or transmitted via telephone line connections or wireless communication transmission (col. 3, lines 33-41 and figure 3), which indicates electric communication line.

Regarding claim 6, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Brooks disclose that the information data may be record onto a record medium wherein the reproduction control information is transferred as well (col. 3, lines 6-26).

Regarding claim 7, Brooks, Jr. et al., (herein, Brooks) discloses an audio transfer storage and playback system (figures 1-3). Brooks disclosure comprises and receiver/player device which may be stand-alone unit for use in a home or office or a unit of an automobile (col. 3, lines 49-53), which reads on the audio information reproducing apparatus; a computer server (1) with music/recording libraries of prerecorded music or voice on tapes, CDs, etc., and means of recording and storing live music or voice, wherein the recorded music may be categorized as to format as classical, jazz, contemporary, rap, and others, and same for the recorded voice works (col. 3, lines 6-17), which reads on a memory for storing audio information comprising a plurality of unit information; a transmission means (5) to deliver the stored data which includes the different formats (classical, jazz, contemporary, rap, and others, and same for the recorded voice works) in which the music and voice recordings are provided for playback in an audio receiver/player device, (col. 3, lines 17-24 and col. 30-41), which reads on the transmitting device for transmitting correspondence information to an external portions; a receiver/player (6) receives the transmitted audio data with reproduction control information, which is inherent by the fact that the audio works having been record or stored in different formats, which reads obtaining information to control the reproduction manner of the audio; and a microprocessing unit (10) or microprocessing memory system for enabling the reproduction of the audio information unit from memory (col. 3, lines 56-65), which reads on a controlling device.

Regarding claim 8, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 7). Brooks further disclose the receiver/player device which may be unit for use in an automobile (col. 3, lines 49-53), which reads on movable body being a car.

Regarding claims 9 and 11, Brooks, Jr. et al., (herein, Brooks) discloses an audio transfer storage and playback system (figures 1-3). Brooks disclosure comprises and receiver/player device which may be stand-alone unit for use in a home or office or a unit of an automobile (col. 3, lines 49-53), which reads on the audio information reproducing apparatus; a computer server (1) with music/recording libraries of prerecorded music or voice on tapes, CDs, etc., and means of recording and storing live music or voice, wherein the recorded music may be categorized as to format as classical, jazz, contemporary, rap, and others, and same for the recorded voice works (col. 3, lines 6-17), which reads on a memory for storing audio information comprising a plurality of unit information; a transmission means (5) to deliver the stored data which includes the different formats (classical, jazz, contemporary, rap, and others, and same for the recorded voice works) in which the music and voice recordings are provided for playback in an audio receiver/player device, (col. 3, lines 17-24 and col. 30-41), which reads on the transmitting device for transmitting correspondence information to an external portions; a receiver/player (6) receives the transmitted audio data with reproduction control information, which is inherent by the fact that the audio works having been record or stored in different formats, which reads obtaining information to control the reproduction manner of the audio; and a microprocessing unit (10) or microprocessing memory system for enabling the reproduction of the audio information unit from memory (col. 3, lines 56-65), which reads on a controlling device; further Brooks disclose that information and/or data may be transferred to the computer server, which constitutes as generating apparatus of the audio works and reproduction control information, and to the receiver/player device via telephone line connections or wireless communication transmission (col. 3, lines 33-41 and col. 5, lines 26-30 and figure 3); and further the computer server (generating apparatus) and the receiver/player device (audio information reproducing apparatus) are separate devices (figure 3).

Regarding claim 13, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 9). Brooks disclose that information and/or data may be transferred and/or transmitted via telephone line connections or wireless communication transmission (col. 3, lines 33-41 and figure 3), which indicates electric communication line.

Regarding claim 14, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1). Brooks disclose that the information data may be record onto a record medium wherein the reproduction control information is transferred as well (col. 3, lines 6-26).

which may be a unit for use in an automobile (col. 3, lines 49-53), which reads on movable body; and the computer server (generating device) which may constitutes as a personal computer.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 4. Claims 2 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Brooks.

Regarding claims 2 and 10, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1 and 9, respectively). Brooks disclosure teaches that the unit information may be a music work (music composition) and inherently provides indication of partial music information, as evident by the fact that alphanumeric information about the particular piece of music can be provided (col. 4, lines 2-6). However, Brooks fails to specifically disclose the title of the music composition. The examiner takes official notice that the tile of a music composition is well known. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the invention of Brooks by providing the title of the music piece as part of the audio information or correspondence information of the audio/music for the purpose of enabling the user to know the name or title of the audio selection being played.

5. Claims 4 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Brooks.

Art Unit: 2644

Regarding claims 4 and 12, Brooks discloses everything claimed as applied above (see claim 1 and 9, respectively). Brooks disclosure provides a display for the display an alphanumeric information of the audio works (col. 4, lines 2-6). However, Brooks fails to specifically disclose the title of the music composition. The examiner takes official notice that the display of title of a music composition was well known. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the invention of Brooks by providing a display of the title of the music piece for the purpose of enabling the user to see the name or title of the audio selection being played.
